Be careful about your kitchen shelves, both in the pantry and cabinet. Shelf paper is a nulsance and never looks like anything after the first week. You can buy shelf oilcloth in different widths, and white is the best color, as it will stand plenty of soap suds and washing. Be lavish in the use of oilcloth in your kipchen. Tack it on the table and over the washtubs. Put some in the bottom of you potato and vegetable boxes and in the knife drawers. Let it take the place of newspaper, and you will have less trouble from cockroaches. A large piece tacked up smoothly back of your gas range will save your wall from being grease splattered. It is easy to keep clean, and if you have it all in the same pattern in harmony with your floor oilcloth and your wall paint you will be surprised what a fresh, one A pretty delft or china one, I dainty appearance it will give to your kitchen.

When you buy the muslin or dimity for you window sash curtains don't forget the rods. They only cost 10 cents each complete, and you don't want-your curtains sagging on tack suspended strings. Buy enough of the muslin to make long narrow shirred curtains for the inside of the glass doors to your china closet and kitchen cabinet.

While the japanned tins are all right for bread, cake, flour and sugar, the cartisenware jars are best for smaller staple goods, such as rice, raisins, oatmeal and so on. They, come in all sizes, even the tiny ones for spices, in the Putch blue and white ware, with covers, and a shelf of them up over your iditchen table will be mighty attractive and handy when you come to be queen of the cooking. They are all 'twisled, and k does away with looking into half a dozen paper bags when you want the taploed or currants.

If you intend using a gas range lay in a stock of asbestos mais to set under your granite raucepans and kettles. It will save many a healtanche over things "catching on" Iron frying pans are better than the sheet-iron or granite ones, and you will need at least one enamelled-lined iron pot for pot roasts, &c. Even in preserving, these iron pots are more reliable in giving a steady heat than the granite kettles, especially on gas stoves.

"Where you will never find it again." he mockingly responded. "A royal princess you shall never be!"

"Heip! Heip!" shricked Blossom with all her might and main, and the demon of misrule disappeared just as King Soliumn, Princess Maris, Prince Rudeiph and a host of others came rushing peil-mell to Blossom's assistance.

"I hear you have found the magio ring," said King Seliumm, trying to control his excitement. "Show it to me at once."

ring," said King Seliumm, trying to control his excitement. "Show it to me at once."

"Papa," began Blossom, and burst into tears.

"Not papa tili I see the ring," said King Seliumm. "Then you can call me papa all you like."

"I haven't got it." faltered poor, unfortunate Blossom.

"Not got it." said Prince Rudolph.

"At the bottom of the sea!"

"I lies at the bottom of the sea!"

"At the bottom of the sea!" echoed

Princess Marie, surprised like all the rest. "Why, Rudolph was just telling us that you had found it."

"So I did find it. all by myself." eadd Blossom, dejectedly. "But the demon of misrule has just stolen it from me!"

King Sollumm shook his head a number of times pityingly.

"I declare it's too bad, too bad!" he said "Just as I was about to acknowledge you as my daughter, too!"

"But surely, nunky, you don't doubt that Blossom, found the ring," said Rudolph indignantly. "Why, I saw it my self."

A ring-yes," said King Sollumin.
"But whether it is the ring or not remains to be proved. That can only be determined by a few, myself included.
I'd be willing to take chances myself, but there's the whole kingdom to consider. It would not only be unjust to the Princess Marie, but the people at large to foist upon them some one whose name, really after all, might be olain Spaijh or Jones. You see the force of my reasoning, don't you?

"But what am I to do?" asked Biossom.

"Rut what am I to do?" asked Blossom.

"Get the ring," said King Sollumm.

"It's almost as easy as finding a needle in a haystack. Didn't I hear you remark that it was at the bottom of the sea?"

Humpty Dumpty, who had found his way back to the royal kitchen, pushed forward through the crowd, and began nodding his head energetically.

"Yes. he says so too," spoke up King Sollumm. "Wail, there are submariae beats, sin't there? What's to prevent your finding the ring, if you're sure it, at the bottom of the sea?"

But there were grave dangers that linked beneath the ocean's depths, of which King Sollumn was, ne spoke so lightly little recked. And Blossom, who knew that the demon of misrule had one more wish before his cruel power was ended, dreaded and feared what it would be.
